Mercyhealth Hospitalist Fellowship Program

To ensure our hospitalized patients receive the best possible care, Mercyhealth relies on the well-rounded expertise of hospitalist service providers—doctors and nurse practitioners who specialize in taking care of hospitalized patients.

Mercyhealth hospitalist physicians are residency-trained in internal medicine or family medicine, and are experts at treating complex medical problems commonly seen in hospitalized patients.

Our hospitalist fellowship program trains and educates physicians interested in working as a hospitalist in rural and suburban settings. In turn, these physicians help meet the growing demand for hospital medicine specialists.

Program goals and objectives

- Provide additional skill and experience in managing adult inpatients
- Optional off-site pediatric experiences are available
- Develop skill and experience in providing consultative service to non-admitting physicians or patients admitted to another physician requesting consultation in the hospital
- Provide additional skill and experience in managing intensely ill adult patients
- Effectively manage patients requiring admission through the emergency department
- Provide experience in the care of hospitalized patients in community-based hospitals in a rural setting
- Provide opportunities for procedural experience appropriate for the care of hospitalized patients

Mercyhealth offers significant opportunity to tailor the curriculum to your personal career objectives. Opportunities include participation in hospital committees, research, leadership development, teaching and quality improvement initiatives.
