

Going to the doctor's office: Endoscopy clinic

I get to go to the Doctors office because they want to help me feel healthy.

When I get to the clinic I will get to ride in an elevator up to the second floor.

When I get off the elevator, I will get to check in with the nice person behind the desk, she might look like this.

Next, I get to go to my own special room where the doctor and nurses will take care of me. They will ask me to put on a special gown while I am in the room.

When I am in the room, I get to be with really nice nurses who are going to help me.

The nurses are going to ask me some questions and also start my IV. My IV is where the nurses will give me medicine to help me. First, they will spray my hand with a spray that will make my hand very cold.

Then the nurse will poke my hand to put the IV in, but it won't hurt because they sprayed my hand first.

When I get the IV in, I get to pick the color of the band that the nurse will wrap my hand with. The IV may make me feel sleepy

When I am all done at the doctor's office, one of the nice nurses will push me to my car in a wheelchair.

When I get home, I get to rest for the rest of the day.
